Letter from Brunswick.

[Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette.]

Brunswick County, Va., April 23rd, 1888.

—Good fare, prompt attention and liberal accommodations is the pleasant lot of the weary traveler who tarries at the Hotel Thomas in this pretty little courthouse village of Lawrenceville, with its three hundred population. It is court day, and the streets and by-ways are crowded, every man seeming on business bent, rushing hither and thither; stores, crowded with customers, horse dealers numerous, with horses and mules of every age, color and condition, including some fine stock. People from every section of the county, by common consent, come together once a month to transact business and exchange civilities. Everybody is good natured and all sober, for "spirits" are not dispensed to this place, and are only sold in several remote parts of the county.

I love old Brunswick; it is a beautiful and productive county, with great diversity of agricultural products. Cotton is the great staple; it grows finely and yields abundantly. The lands are rolling, views extensive, farms in a high state of cultivation, people generally industrious, generous and hospitable and always glad to see and entertain strangers. The Meherrin river runs directly through its center whilst the Nottoway forms its northern boundary. It is well watered in every section by numerous rivers and creeks flowing into the river. The farmers you meet here are a solid looking set of men, their ruddy cheeks and firm grasp indicate their cordial nature. Lawrenceville, after about a hundred years of quiet repose, has recently taken a start. Several new store houses have been built, and a few young and enterprising merchants have opened up large stocks. It is expected that the Atlantic and Danville R. R. will soon be pushed through from Bellfield, but the company has made so many promises and complied with so few, that the people have not as much faith as they once had. Indeed, it is a line that ought to be pushed without delay through this great producing country. About two miles from here is located the Episcopal Infirmary for colored people, and it is a quiet charity. There are 43 inmates, and Mrs. Judge F. B. Buford, of this county, has entire control of the institution. The buildings are neat and are located in an attractive grove, as is also the chapel, at which Bishop Randolph preached a few days ago.

I learned from a party interested of a bold swindle perpetrated upon an estimable old lady in this vicinity. Mrs. Reines owns several small tracts of land in Texas, which, being unproductive, and having owned them since shortly after the Mexican war, claimed but little attention from her. She had placed the property years ago in the hands of an attorney. Singularly enough, the attorney appeared in this section a few days ago, and drove thirty miles to "pay his respects" to his client, as he was en route for New York. His manners were charming, his conversation entertaining, and soon came his talk on the Texas property, which appeared valueless in his eyes, particularly one small tract, which was surrounded by other people's land entirely cut off. He thought it advisable that he should sell it if he could, and said that it might bring something over one hundred dollars. He might even push it up to one hundred and fifty, but he would do the best he could to get rid of it for her. She consented, and the next suggestion from him was that as she doubtless needed funds he would, out of his own pocket, give her one hundred dollars for it, and run the risk of a profit for commission. This gentle and sympathetic conversation totally disarmed her of any suspicion of his real designs, and thinking him so kind and liberal she at once accepted the offer, the amount was paid, the papers signed, and he was soon on his way home rejoicing. The next day the lady, who is 75 years old, received a letter from another lawyer in Texas offering $2,000 for the same tract of land, which fully explained the disinterested view of the deceptive attorney. Upon the receipt of the letter she at once consulted her home lawyer, had him write out the facts, made oath to the same, had the county seal attached, and forwarded the paper to a Texas lawyer, hoping that the transfer or sale might be set aside by the court, in view of the deception practiced. The lady's financial ability is very limited, which makes the transaction more to be deplored. C. W. G.
